A NEW FIELD.

Rev. E. D. Hanna to Engage in Children's Home Work.

WILL BE A SUPERINTENDENT

Of one of the Three West Virginia Districts—His Farewell to his Congregation at Zane Street M. E. Church Last Night—The Objects of the Society Interestingly Outlined. To Provide Homeless Children With Good Homes and Christian Teaching.

The Children's Home Society of West Virginia was the occasion for an interesting talk at Zane Street M. E. church last night by the pastor, Rev. E. D. Hanna, who is closely connected with the work of the society, and will assume active connection with it next month. Rev. Mr. Hanna announced last night that he had been chosen as superintendent of the three districts in this state, and that he would receive the conference's sanction this week. Hence his talk contained a farewell note to the congregation to which he has ministered for a year, he coming here from New Martinsville.

The story of the childhood of Moses was the groundwork of his discourse, and he instanced the necessity of caring for homeless children in order to make of them Christian citizens, and remove them from crime-generating environments. The society has a foothold now in thirty-seven states, being three years old in West Virginia, and chartered less than two years ago, and it has found homes for about eighty children. The society is not institutional, that is, it does not house the little ones in an institution, but provides them with homes where a child is desired.

The speaker instanced the late George W. Childs, editor of the Philadelphia Public Ledger, and a philanthropist known the world over, as a boy who was picked up on a doorstep, unknown and uncared for. He was given the name George Washington Child by his adopted parents. Other men who rose to lofty stations from similar surroundings were mentioned. Wheeling was not large enough to be infested with the slums of certain cities, continued Rev. Mr. Hanna, and he paid it the tribute of being the best governed city of its size he had been in or knew of.

Three kinds of homes long for children, he said. First, those where the children have grown up and left the homestead, leaving the parents to long for the prattle and patter of the little ones; second, where the family has lost a boy or girl by death, and third, where the parents were not blessed with children.

The Children's Home Society sought to place the children in homes far removed from where they were known, so that they could grow up in the full belief that their foster parents were their natural fathers and mothers, and to prevent any unpleasant reflections by the cruelly inclined. Such a work was a grand mission, remarked the speaker, in announcing his future field. Mr. Hanna will have charge of northern West Virginia, and it is not improbable that he will succeed Supt. Comstock, the pioneer in this work in this state, and who has made many sacrifices for it.

Rev. Mr. Hanna and other local M. E. ministers will leave to-morrow for Parkersburg to attend the West Virginia conference.

HARVEST SUNDAY.

Appropriate Services at Presbyterian and Lutheran Churches.

Yesterday, in all of the Presbyterian churches of this and surrounding cities, and in many of the Lutheran churches, the congregations observed the annual Harvest Sunday, a service that is one of the most beautiful and impressive given in the Protestant churches. The church interiors were decorated with grains and fruits, typifying the occasion. The Sunday schools of some of the churches gave special entertainments last evening, including that of Zion's German Lutheran church, where a fine programme of dialogues and songs was rendered by the young people.
